An Important Sale of Household Linens, Inaugurated Preparatory to Enlarging the Space Devoted to Such Goods.

Every housewife admires fine Linens. Fondness for good Damasks and Towels is innate. Even the poorest in purse is spurred, by pride and taste, to secure the choicest qualities and richest styles that her means permit. The items quoted to-day are powerful incentives for quick buying. The variety expressed in type is very moderate, but the display of merchandise in the store is elaborate. All are entirely new. They have just landed, being the purchases of our buyer's recent visit abroad. However, his work will remain half-finished until you see the goods. Everything that progressive retailers can do has been done. You must make the Linen movement complete by your presence. Nothing else needed. If you come you'll examine the values and business will follow:

Our policy is elaborately liberal. It would be absurd for us to claim any special advantages in gathering these goods. The mills of the world are accessible to all retailers. However, we are ever alert, continually on the qui vive for exceptional chances. No store is quicker or readier to grasp them when they appear. That is one explanation of our leadership. The other, the vital and important cause of low prices here, is that we are willing to sell on a narrower margin of profit than any other dealer. Admitting, for the sake of argument, that we pay the same as others, the fact that our policy insists on marking goods at the very lowest of low rates carries home the conviction that money may be saved by coming to us.
